Do you know anyone who has permanent cosmetics?		How long have you been thinking about having the treatment?
Why do you want the treatment?		Where did you first learn about permanent cosmetics?
Treatment to be received
Client expectations regarding the treatment and outcome

Please read the following carefully:

- This treatment is a form of tattooing.
- Retouch procedures may be required.
- You must wait 4 to 6 weeks before a retouch treatment can be performed.
- In rare cases the pigment may migrate under the skin.
- Application of permanent cosmetics can be painful.
- The pigments will fade.
- Immediately after the treatment, the pigment can be 30 to 50% darker than the desired result.
- There may be immediate or delayed allergic reaction to pigments. However, allergic reactions are extremely rare.
- A negative sensitivity patch / allergy test result will not guarantee that you will not have an allergic reaction.
- Infections can occur.
- Allergic reactions to topical anaesthetics can occur.
- There will be swelling and redness following the procedure.
- You may experience minor bleeding.
- Those receiving an eye treatment should have someone drive them home.
- Corneal abrasion may occur during eyeliner procedures. However, corneal abrasion is rare.
- If you have had previous problems with cold sores/herpes and wish to receive a lip treatment, you may have a reoccurrence of cold sores following the procedure. Anti-herpes medication is available over the counter or on prescription and has been shown to prevent or minimize such outbreaks.
- Lip treatments will appear dry and flaky for approximately one week following the procedure.
- Camouflage procedures are experimental in nature.
- Camouflage procedures will need to be tested for skin colour matching.
- There are few effective methods for pigment removal.
- If you have an MRI scan within 3 months your permanent cosmetics procedure, it is recommended that you discuss this with your doctor.
- Possible scarring, inconsistency of colour and loss of eyelashes may occur.

I have read and fully understood the above information.
